THE financial discussion was not re sumed yesterday in the U.S. Senate, and there is no telling when the subject will come up for final action. And even when it does come up there is no certainty that a bill either for contraction or expansion can pass that body, so evenly divided is it between the two views. Why cannot the whole discussion, therefore, be accommodated by a declaratory resolution on the part of both houses setting forth that nasmuch as irreconcilable views, in to celebrate the triumph of principle consequence of conflicting interests, that are no longer respectively being consequence of conflicting interests, that are no longer respectively.

The bill in relation to the Centennial Exhibition was taken up, the pending question being an amendment by Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, making the Exhibition national in its character instead of international.

Mr. Sherman moved to refer the bill to the Computes on Appropriations with the Committee on Appropriations with-out instructions. He would vote for a large appropriation to aid the Exhibition, either national or international, and be-lieved Philapelphia the best place to hold it, but he wanted the bill to be carfully prepared. Congress should not pass bill as it was now before the Senate. Congress should not pass the bill as it was now before the Senate, and and thus commit itself. The bill as it atood bound Congress hand and loot. If the trustees of the Exhibition should con-tract a debt of fifty millions of tollars the government would have to pay it. The ople of his State favored the exhibition and desired to see it held in Philadelphia They were willing to contribute of their means to aid it, but like prudent people, wanted to know how much it would cost. He hoped the bill would be referred.

Mr. Stevenson said there were too many important questions involved in this bill to permit him to remain slient. He was not opposed to the proper cele-bration of the 4th of July, 1876, but deoration of the 4th of July, 1876, but de-nied the power of Congress to take money from the National Treasury for such an enterprise. He quoted from former de-bates on the subject to show that the ex-hibition was a local affair, and that Con-gress was only asked to give it dignity. Should Congress appropriate funds for it at least from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 would be required.

Mr. Stevenson denied the right of Congress to appropriate the money for the stock jobing corporation and said the occasion would be just as sacred without mixing merchandise and dollars and cents with it. It would not be in a coordened. It would not be in accordance with our republican institutions to entertain the crowned heads of Europe in the manner they are received by their brother sovereigns in the foreign countries upon occasions of visit, and the peoples money should not be used for any such purpose. Mr. Bayard said it was not contemplated to entertain the crowned heads of Europe, but only to invite the Governments of the world to send representatives to the exhibition, the same as we had done to England, France and Austria.

Mr. Scott said the whole spirit of our institutions revolted against the idea of entertaining the crowned heads, and he was surprised that the Senators had taken such a view of the case.
